LUMINESSA

Los Angeles, USA

I discovered hula hooping and flow arts in 2016, and fell in love with this intuitive form of expression. Soon after, I picked up LED and fire performance, incorporating influences from bellydance, burlesque, go-go, and hip-hop into my evolving style. Wanting to gain a strong educational foundation, in 2018 I studied modern dance under Karen McDonald at Santa Monica College, whose credits include Michael Jackson's Thriller music video and choreographing for Beyoncé at the Grammy's, to name a few. My understanding of movement, form and figure is also informed by my extensive background in yoga, having received serious mentorship in both Iyengar yoga (from a former disciple of the yogi Iyengar himself) and Hatha yoga (from a former Buddhist monk). My experience includes background dancing for concerts and festivals, choreographing and performing in music videos, being a go-go dancer and "hype girl" at electronic music events, and performing at modern burlesque shows.
